EDITOR IN DISTRESS

So, I read in the paper that a guy was shot to death at a stripclub in far east Dallas. Well, that's not good for the industry, especially with all these new bills and lawsuits dealing with the adult entertainment industry floating around. Hopefully people will realize how rare that type of violence is considering how often it happens at random bars across DFW.

I finally finished my move on the very last day of my lease. Does anyone every get moved out weeks before their lease ends? I tried, but kept putting the move aside. I did move most of my stuff a week ago, but planned to finish the rest on last Friday since I had no plans for the weekend. Well, what happens when the weekend looks uneventful, something comes up.

First, I found out my friend Zamra was going to perform on Saturday at Reno's Chop Shop with Death Rock Cafe's Cirque De Fear and then I found out that the documentary Anvil: The Story of Anvil was going to premiere Friday at The Magnolia, plus the band, Anvil, was going to perform a short set after the 9:45 premiere. Click Clack, tickets bought on the internet.

Most of Wednesday and Thursday I worked on moving stuff and fixing my room. Friday I started partying around 3pm and by 8pm I was ready to hit the theater. My originally date fell through, so I called my trusty drinking buddy Sarah who wouldn't be annoyed that I was slightly toasted already. We got to the Magnolia a little late and got seats way up front. Which worked out well, cause now we had front row seats to the live Anvil performance, so what if we had to look up to watch the film. The documentary was pretty good. If you've ever been in a band, you'll probably share their joy and sadness. I got a little teary eyed during certain scenes. After the movie, Anvil came out and rocked the crowd with four heavy head banging tunes. Big thanks to Alyssa Fry for sending me pictures. You can see them on page 16.

Needless to say, I was pretty hung over Saturday and didn't get much done. I was pretty close to staying home that night, but I sucked it up and went to Reno's to see Zamra perform. I'm pretty glad I did. The show was pretty entertaining. I would describe it as a cross between burlesque and freak show. See some cool pictures my friend Sam aka DV8 photography took.

Sunday... my last day to move and clean. Luckily I didn't drink much Saturday, cause I made myself get up at 9am to finish moving a few big things and scrub that place up. My co-worker Sheila came by to take a TV stand she wanted, which lead to... another event. Turns out Oliver Peck from Elm Street Tattoo and Anchor Screen Printing was hosting a fund raiser for a girls soccer team he sponsors. A $10 donation got you free food and beer, plus there were live bands playing and hot girls washing cars. After two hours of fun there, we called it quits and I went home to pass out.

It's a good thing nothing is going on this week. Yeah right. I already have plans to meet Leilene from Flavor of Love at The Lodge this week. Check out the interview I did and visit her at The Lodge. -Gil Tha Thrill

B.B. KING

Had the fantastic opportunity to catch the legendary B.B. King and his band (which has many Texas musicians) last Sunday at House of Blues. Sure, Mr. King did a lot more talk than rock, but who cares? The man is 83 now, and thus entitled to do whatever he wants! My tickets were courtesy KNON 89.3FM radio, by the way, so if you made a pledge during last month's quarterly pledge drive, don't forget to pay it!

LEILENE

Have you ever gone somewhere and thought you recognized a celebrity? Well if you're a frequent visitor to The Lodge than you just might have met Leilene who is known as Smiley from her appearances on VH1's Flavor of Love, Flava Of Love Girls Charm School and I Love Money 2. She is in town this week at The Lodge and graced us with an interview. -Gil Russell

Hi Leilene. Was Flavor of Love your first reality gig? How was your experience with that and other reality shows?

No, actually being on National Lampoon was my first experience. It was while I was in Jamaica shooting for a fitness magazine that they decided to incorporate a documentary style to it with the lovely ladies doing a strip poker competition. I loved shooting with them because they were on location in Hedonism... that was a different experience altogether.

Since then you've done Flavor of Love Girls Charm School, I Love Money 2 and tons more. What are you working on now?

Well, I'll always have a home with VH1. Being part of the original cast of one the top-rated shows on VH1 has been quite an honor. I will be a celeb reality judge for Fox Reality's Battle of the Bods, shooting a horror movie called Mar Muerte at the end of the summer and I'm producing one of my movies, which got picked up for international distribution and will be out on DVD in October. Lots and lots of different projects!

I just read that you were the runner up, known to wrestling fans as Alexis, for the 2005 WWE RAW Diva Search. Did you do some actual wrestling?

I actually trained with Ron Hutchison back home in Toronto where I'm originally from, but the Raw Diva search was more of an eye candy-type of competition. That was an awesome experience, being in the squared circle with famous wrestlers and thousands of people watching live.

I like that you're a UFC fan. Who is your favorite fighter? Were you rooting for Machida or Evans? I was going for Machida.

I absolutely love UFC! A lot of my friends are into mixed martial arts, like my friend Cung Le-- he wants to train me in his martial arts form. I like Tito Ortiz just because he's from the OC like me and we have worked together doing Total Non-Stop Action back in the day. I admire his entrepreneurial spirit. I like Machida-- he is a very skilled fighter.

You're in town this week working at The Lodge. When did you first dance there? Are you dancing there as a feature dancer?

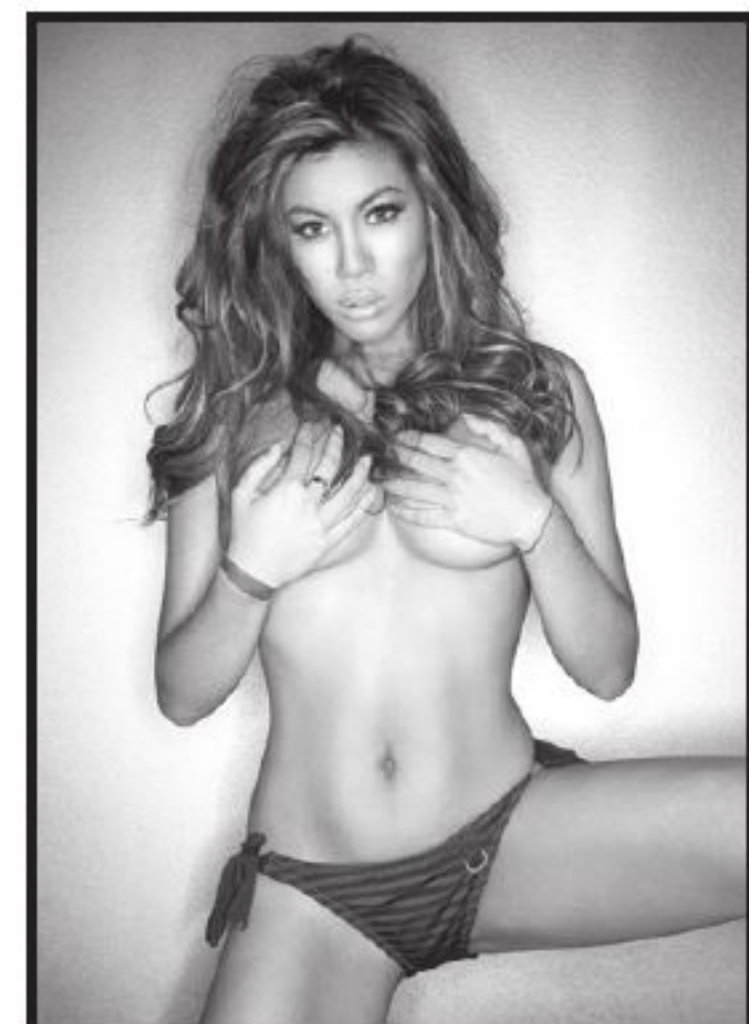

I'm in town until June 10th at The Lodge. You know, I've never thought about featuring at The Lodge but now you've got me thinking. I'm very fortunate. I always get to be busy and the VIP clientele loves me there... I guess it's because I have a love of cigars like they do.

What's your favorite thing about working at The Lodge? What nights will you be working this week?

I like the cigar room at The Lodge-- they have a wide range of selections. The food there is awesome-- I'm all about their desserts, and the décor it is warm and cozy. I also love the staff there. They are like a big family. The one thing I like the most is that it is run by a woman so it has a feminine touch to it. This has inspired me to eventually have my own gentleman's club in the future but I would like to have one in Canada. I love it at The Lodge so much that I ended up getting a place out here to live half of the time. I'm working Wednesday through Saturday from 6pm until 2 am until June 10th. After that, I have to head to NYC to do an autograph signing at a convention and shoot my 2010 calendar.

From reading your "Who I'd like to meet" on Myspace, it seems like you're the dream girl for funny nerds who love movies. Any luck with that?

Well, yes I'm actually talking to a guy who I bumped into three years ago at a mall in Las Vegas. We have communicated via cyberspace since our first encounter on Skype, Facebook... every online social network and even gaming! We are on Mob Wars (laughs). I really enjoy having an intellectual conversation with a guy... it wouldn't hurt if they cook because I'm not meant for the kitchen. In regards to my love life, I'm going to be having my first official date in NYC and we are watching Angels & Demons. I know, I know... I'm pretty dorky.

Thanks for the interview. Looking forward to meeting you in person. Anything else you would like to mention?

I'm looking forward to meeting you, too!!! My official fan club is www.leilene.net and it will be up July 1st. In the meantime, add me on Twitter - www.twitter.com/leilene, www.myspace.com/leilene, www.youtube.com/leilene on Facebook and check out www.leileneonline.com.

Brooklyn Burlesque Beauty, Tara Heffner, Sues After Porn Label

The lady says she's into burlesque - not porn.

A Brooklyn beauty who performs in panties and pasties is suing the Learning Annex after videos she did for the company were posted online identifying her as a "Young Sexy Porn Star Stripper Dancer" and a "Big T--- Sexy Teen Girl."

Tara Heffner, whose stage name is Veronica Varlow, led a Learning Annex seminar on burlesque dancing last year.

She also provided advice on sultry dance moves and how to apply glitter lipstick in videos she did for the company's affiliate, OneMinuteU.com.

When the videos surfaced on YouTube, the sexy siren was no longer simply dispensing tips on how to get "sparkly, burlesque lips" or "how to be sexy and flirty."

"She's a burlesque performer and she takes it very seriously as an art form," said her lawyer, Ivan Saperstein. "She's purposely avoided nudity her entire career to avoid being harmed in this way."

The Manhattan Supreme Court suit accuses the Learning Annex and contractor PHI Media of trashing Heffner's good name by connecting her to X-rated entertainment.

"She was outraged," Saperstein said. "She views what she does as a burlesque performer as being no different than what the Victoria's Secret models do."

The suit says the "porn star" and "sexy teen girl" tags have damaged Heffner's business and caused her "great mental pain and anguish."

A Learning Annex spokeswoman did not respond to requests for comment.

Heffner, 30, operates Danger Dame, an online clothing boutique that touts itself as "Deadly Fashion for the Femme Fatale."

Its 1940s and '50s-inspired items include thigh-high stockings, garter panties and a $92 "Hell Hath No Fury" dress.

As Veronica Varlow, Heffner has starred in shows where she prances around in high heels and feathers. She also appeared in an episode of MTV's "Made," in which she taught an outcast teenager with pink hair how to dance burlesque.

Did I Ever Tell You The One About... And other strange oddities of the world

Bride Rescues Family From House Fire
A Connecticut family has been saved from a house fire by a new bride who rushed inside through thick smoke while wearing her wedding gown.

Officials say Georgette Clemons had just left her wedding reception Sunday evening when she spotted smoke coming from a Bridgeport home. Clemons got out of the car she was riding in and ran into the home. She says a woman was yelling about her animals and didn't want to leave, so she had to pull her out. As firefighters arrived and battled the blaze after members of the Eitelberg family were rescued, Clemons was nearby folding her blackened wedding dress.

Clemons says she messed up her shoes, but says that's no big deal because everyone is safe.

China Puts A Stop To Snake-Bitten Cock-In-A-Pot

Chinese health authorities are putting a stop to restaurants serving chickens which have been bitten to death by poisonous snakes and cooked up for a supposedly detoxing meal.

The dish, served by a small number of eateries in the southern province of Guangdong and the southwestern city of Chongqing, has generated a storm of publicity and controversy in the Chinese media and amongst bloggers.

Health authorities in Guangdong have already told restaurants to stop serving "poisonous snake-bitten chicken" and now those in Chongqing have joined in.

High-roller Has Bad Feng Shui In American Casino

A Taiwanese man who lost two million US dollars in Las Vegas is threatening to sue the casino for using feng shui to cause his losing streak, a report here said.

The man, surnamed Yuan, alleged that the Venetian dug a one-metre (40-inch) square hole on the wall of the presidential suite he was staying in April last year and covered it with a black cloth, said Apple Daily.

The casino also put two white towels in front of Yuan's suite and turned on two large fans facing his room without notifying him, it said.

Yuan claimed that his luck turned bad after discovering the arrangements and that he went from winning 400,000 dollars to losing two million, the report said.

"We Chinese drape black and white cloths only when there is a death in the family. It is such a taboo for regular people, let alone for the gamblers," he was quoted as saying.

Yuan filed a complaint against the Venetian after returning to Taiwan and demanded the cancellation of a two-million-dollar debt to the casino, half of it on credit, it said.

The casino has promised to refund him 100,000 dollars in cash and the same amount in chips, the paper said, without explaining why it had agreed to this.

Feng shui, or wind and water, is an ancient Chinese belief that seeks to channel good and bad psychic energy through the arrangement of furniture and ornaments.

There are some common feng shui taboos among Taiwanese gamblers, such as bringing a hair brush to a gambling table as "brush" is a homophone of "lose," the report said.

Family Axes Wedding Plans, Egyptian Cuts Off Organ

A 25-year-old Egyptian man cut off his own penis to spite his family after he was refused permission to marry a girl from a lower class family, police reported Sunday.

After unsuccessfully petitioning his father for two years to marry the girl, the man heated up a knife and sliced off his reproductive organ, said a police official.

The young man came from a prominent family in the southern Egyptian province of Qena, one of Egypt's poorest and most conservative areas that is also home to the famed ancient Egyptian ruins of Luxor.

The man was rushed to the hospital but doctors were unable to reattach the severed member, the official added citing the police report filed after the incident.

Quitting With Style

There comes a time in one's life and frankly for some several times in one's life where they get to quit a job they hate on their own terms. Ideally, we'd all love to have some grandiose scene where we become the center of attention and create a spectacle making our superiors look like the chumps they truly are in front of their superiors and your peers. Then everyone cheers and carries you out of the office chanting, "We quit too!" like some sort hero at the end of a sports movie from the 80s.

But alas, more often than not, we have to worry about future references from people whom you yourself wouldn't give a good recommendation. So it's an awkward slide of an envelope across a desk that contains your 2-week's notice and verbal apologies for leaving to the jerk off boss whose throat you want to squeeze so hard that the whites of his eyes turn red from all the burst capillaries. Then you get the speech on how you still need to give your all while you're at this current job and thinly veiled mockeries at your decision to leave such a great company in the first place.

It sucks all the way around and I would hope that if anyone would have the opportunity they would get to quit with style. It need not be malicious or disruptive just something with...flair. I was recently faced with this very scenario and thought I might try to quit with a little style but hit a few speed bumps along the way.

Go figure.

I had to do the 2-week's notice thing so standing on a table with a huge F.U. sign like Norma Ray was out and I'm not a sociopath so burning the joint down was out too. I wanted to be mean and vindictive but I couldn't so I opted for something of in the way of flair by figuring that I could at least give everyone a decent floor show upon my exit. I thought of a few things like hiring a she-male strip-o-gram to humiliate the jerk off bosses but they would definitely have been stopped by security as soon as the first button was popped off. An impromptu roast by celebrity impersonator was briefly considered but who wants to see a dude dressed like Willie Nelson crack bad jokes about a guy everyone hates for five minutes at a full day rate. In that case, the joke would be on me.

Finally, I figured I could get away with a mariachi band. They'd burst through the door playing something peppy in Espanol and throw in some English strains of, "Mike quits" and that would be that.

First of all it's damn near impossible to find a mariachi band in the yellow pages or by calling information. I went to my local Mexican restaurant and spoke with the manager who gave me a several numbers and resources. I proceeded to spend an entire evening trying to negotiate pricing with folks who spoke English as well as I spoke Spanish which isn't very good. By the way adding the letter "O" to words does not turn them Spanish. For instance, "work" in English does not translate to "el work-O. It just makes you look like an ass and makes them drive up the price for the arrogant gringo. So the cheapest price I was quoted was around four hundred dollars. That's a bit steep to make a statement to those who tormented you for an extended period of time especially if chips and salsa are not included.

I knew I had a good idea but there had to be a way to achieve it within at least a fifty-dollar budget. Then I remembered that there was a convenience store near by where all the day laborers congregated and surely amongst all that humanity there would be at least four guys who owned sombreros and could play guitar. I was going to create my own band for my own purposes. I was Malcom-o McLaren-o. I pulled up and was immediately swarmed by at least thirty guys. I got out and explained my plight never once pointing out the irony of the whole situation. Nothing but blank stares and shrugs were all I could get out of these guys. "So none of you can play guitar or owns a sombrero?"

Nothing.

I ran my fingers through my hair and tried a different tack. "What if I told you that I would give you fifty bucks for a half hour of your time?"

One of them called me maricon and walked off. I was loosing them.

"So none of you can play any kind of instrument?" I sullenly asked.

Then straight from some sort of surrealist cookbook, one of them pulls out a tattered tambourine and smiles. Not even questioning where it came from I turned to him and said, "Do you own a sombrero?" "No."

Whatever, I can't be choosy at this point so I run through the idea of him flanking me singing I quit to strains of La Cucaracha throwing in some yips and aye yi yis along the way for good measure. To which he responds, "No."

The crowd was starting to disperse and my Mexican Stevie Nicks was about to bail as well. I had no more money to offer and frankly I was getting discouraged. I shouted, "You guys need work and I'm offering it- I can't believe you're turning down good money!" Another truck pulls up and the swarm shifts completely away from me.

"And not one sombrero among lot of you! You should be ashamed! This is an abomination!" was shout by me at their indifferent backs as they greeted more traditional job opportunities.

I finally got my big scene. Too bad there weren't any subtitles for my indifferent audience.

BARKIN' OUT LOUD

by Pat "Two Dogs" Snow

"baseball". I guess some things are simply simple because he looked at his layout, didn't like the name "diamondball", so he ups and calls it "base" ball.

That's probably how Canadian Dr. James Naismith who invented "our" American hoops game came up with the name "basket" ball. Somehow, after time and association, we've come to love the term "basket" ball. I reckon it sounds better'n bounce ball.

Even hockey's got a name. Granted, that ain't much of a name, and when you put the word "horse" in front of it there's an entirely different meaning, but still, it's a name. By the way, Colonel Potter on MASH is the first person to publicly use the term horse hockey, along with horse feathers, and other slangy sayings.

According to legend, a British Colonel Hockey used a game of hitting a puck like object with sticks to keep his men in shape. Hitting a ball with sticks, like field hockey, are shown to have been around for about 4000 years, depicted with drawings on tombs in Egypt. Colonel Hockey is given credit for the modern version of "ice hockey" but there were games of sticks, nets or goals, and objects on ice for at least a hundred years before the 1850's in Nova Scotia. Although we don't have a clear title for who invented the game, it's still got a name and isn't just called "puck", or "puckgame".

Not so with football.

Now they've called the football itself names, like pigskin, wounded duck, bullet, and so forth, but they haven't called the game itself a name.

You can trace the origins back to English rugby, then in this country, probably contests between McGill and Harvard in the mid 1800's which is about the time when American gridiron rules started developing.

The problem we have here is that folks were just simply calling the game football and even when organized play began, nobody gave the game a name.

Most sports were transitional in development, like most things are, and our American gridiron classic is no exception. But it sure seems like a hunk of road tar's been thrown all over our glorious football history by not having a true name to call it. Kinda makes you think it's just a poor yard dog to all the other papered dogs in the hunt.

NBA — FINALS

Oh, man, let's rehash a wee bit of old news before we start the Finals.

Denver's ouster from the Western Conference Finals was a disaster. It was a tragedy. It was wrong.

I was hit with a ton of wrath from die hards and casuals alike, and the vast majority just didn't want the Lakers to win. There were a few LA cacklers out there, but they were just displaced smog heads so I ignored 'em.

What happened to the Nuggets? Hey, until the fourth period of Game 5 in LA, most of the Northern Hemisphere thought Denver had a better'n even chance of pulling it off. But fan sentiment is that the ref's took that game away from the Nuggets.

Remember the fired NBA ref, now in prison for gambling on NBA games, and he testified that the NBA has influenced games with the officials? Do you wonder what he'd say now? Yeah, that boat seems to float down the same stream, huh.

But, back in Denver for Game 6 the Nuggets hit the wall. It got into their heads and they couldn't shake it lose. What's worse, is that by the end of the game it looked like they'd simply quit.

Cleveland can't say that after having their lunch sacked and handed to 'em and thrown out the building. What you can say is that that whole organization and their fans are nothing but a bunch of whiners and their super star James is a hands down poor sport and a number one poor loser.

The Cav's have a record setting regular season, sweep the first two rounds of the playoffs, then finally get their butts kicked in the Eastern Conference Finals. So now insiders and outsiders alike are saying the team doesn't have enough "great" support for LeBron James.

Cheese, I say, and I'm talking stinky Limburger.

And this LeBron James, aka King James, aka heir to Kobe's thrown, doesn't respect the game enough, or the fans, or tradition, to acknowledge Orlando's victory by shaking hands and exchanging congrats with the Magic team and coaches.

Regardless of how he justifies his lack of courtesy and respect, this is nothing more than a guy who's totally self-indulged. He's got a solid team around him, enough to win what they did this season, so maybe he just oughta ask himself why they didn't win the series? Maybe if he played better defense, maybe if he did a better job of passing to his teammates, giving assists, getting hard offensive and defensive rebounds.

Here's a clue, James, in this league you still gotta earn it in the playoffs and along with the rest of the Cavaliers, YOU didn't get it done.

Well, tomorrow night, Thursday June 4, Game 1 of the NBA Finals and it's the Orlando Magic and Los Angeles Lakers. Then it's Sunday the 7th for Game 2, then the 9, 11, and 14 are at Orlando, then, if needed, back to LA on the 16th

In the midst of all the hectic commotion of day to day life, a feller occasionally has to go find hisself some solitude, and do a little blank mind mixed in with some day dreamin'. Just sittin' there and sippin' some cold brewski's can let some interesting thoughts pass betwixt the ears.

I had found myself a great little hideaway and was all relaxed when, from some weird spark-plug upstairs, this thought whammed me: America's got the greatest game in the world with no name. Huh?

Oh, yeah. We have the world's biggest, baddest, most popular game and it ain't got no real name attached to it.

What is it?

Football.

The hell you say. Doggone straight, say's I.

You got soccer, whose second name on the rest of the planet is football, but it's a round ball kicked by a foot. You got tennis, a round ball whacked back and forth. How about baseball, Lacrosse, Jai Alai, badminton, handball, racquetball?

And basketball.

Nossiree, football just doesn't have a real name.

Baseball cudda been called throw ball, hit ball maybe, but old Abner he conjures up the name and 18th for Games 6 and 7.

That's right, the first three rounds were played 2-2-1-1-1, now its 2-3-2 for the Finals. The better record still can host 4 games but the second best record has to take all three of their games in a row.

I don't like this format because I believe it adds too much of an advantage to the better record team above what they already have, which is the extra home game.

Touts are not giving Orlando any kind of a chance, saying they'll probably take a couple like Denver did then fade, but I disagree. I think Orlando's got a great balance of team from the starters through the bench, and will take this series to Game 7.

NHL – Stanley Cup

Can the NHL think of any more creative ways to ruin their game for the players and fans? What am I talkin' about? How about the opening round of the Finals the first two games are on back to back nights at Detroit. It doesn't matter that it was at Detroit, it matters that they were on consecutive nights. That hasn't happened in a Stanley Cup Finals in something like 50 some odd years.

I don't care what rationalization the league comes up with, it was nothing less than stupid and it was over the top ignorant.

Baseball can play back to back games because the demands aren't the same. Basketball can play some back to back games but overall need a day between. Hockey, the sport with the most mental and physical demands upon its players, requires a day off between games in the playoffs.

Yeah, in the regular season they'll play some back to backs, but the intensity is so ratcheted up in the post season that fatigue alone exposes the players to higher risks of injury, and gives the fans a lesser product to cheer for.

How's the series going so far? I'll just say that when Pittsburgh dropped the first two in Detroit, the spray painting was on the wall.

Red Wing fans are now begging the Pens to win one at home so there's no sweep, thus forcing a game 5 back in Detroit so the Wings can hoist the Cup at home and not in ARMPITT.

You got Game 4 scheduled for Thursday 4th in Pitt, then Game 5 on the 6th back in Detroit, Game 6 back in Pitt on the 9th, and Game 7 on the 12th back in Detroit, if needed.

Why don't I think the Pen's can take the Wings?

Because just like the Chicago Blackhawks were too young and didn't get anywhere near the level of mental toughness of the Wings, the same thing is happening to the Penguins. Can the Red Wings be beaten? Sure, hell, the Dallas Stars did it during the regular season, which shudda brought a parade to downtown Bigga D. It may not be any consolation, but I think Detroit will be sliding downward beginning next year, but as a whole, the leagues got some teams growing up.

Dallas Stars

Yes, the whole world now knows that Stars owner Hicks has dismantled his two-headed co-GM monster and brought in Joe Nieuwendyk to put the egg back together again.

Les Jackson gets put back into the role that he has tremendously helped the Stars with and that's director of scouting and player development. Hull got the benefit of the Peter Principle, which is a person who rises to a level of his incompetence. He's been promoted up to an executive vice president and also an alternate governor. He was incompetent as a co-GM, so he'll feel comfortable in his exec VP position as he really won't have anything to do, much like his GM job. At least he'll not be able to give us anymore Sean Avery deals.

How will Nieuwendyk do as a General Manager?

Well, he's smart in general, knows the game of hockey very well, and knows what players are supposed to be doing positionally. He knows more than most what it takes to be on teams that can challenge, and win, the Stanley Cup.

I think more than anything he has to be willing, and able, to change the mentality of the Stars organization right now. No, not gut the whole program, but maybe bring in a couple of Russky's and lose a couple of Euro's. You have to have tough to go along with skill, and a few players here and there would help.

Next season we get our Captain, Morrow, back from injury, and Ott had a breakout year, so get a little more defensive help, I mean, Niskanen is maybe an ok fourth line defender but we need a serious upgrade.

Does he let Modano come back or ask him to retire? Mike says he wants to play, but he can no longer shoulder the weight of a top line center. He needs to have Dallas close the schools, toss him a parade, and name a holiday after him, then retire him as a player and put him in the front office.

Mixed Martial Arts

Ok, dogs, just a reminder: Sunday, June 7, on Versus, Mike Brown vs Urijah Faber. This is listed as a featherweight bout, but these are giants in hobbit outfits. Faber wants to make up for the loss, and Brown wants to show him he's still the boss.

These guys have iron fists and they're gonna throw 'em fast and furious.

You get all the distractions outta the way. You get ice cold beer and some cigars. You get ready for the smell of blood. You get ready for a fight.

Readers Response

Two Dogs:

My girl won't go tent camping with me for fear of snakes. I've told her snakes won't crawl into her sleeping bag, but she refuses and will only stay in cabins or hotels. You got any advice on this?

Jan

Dallas

Jan:

When I used to primitive camp I'd get some real lariat rope, the kind that is all rough hewn, meaning it's not smooth but has little pieces of rope fiber sticking out. Snakes have very soft underbellies and legend has it they will not slither over the rough ends. Inside a tent shouldn't be a problem if you always keep the flap closed, but if she's nervous, do the rope thing in there. (Bit of advice on that, if, during the middle of the night, you seem to think she needs her pulse taken, watch crawling over from your own sleeping bag as that stuff will scrape the skin right off your bare legs.) Don't know for sure if that's a "guarantee" but I never got bit. Also, if you suspect snakes might be in the area, bring along some good bourbon for you and her. Don't share with the snake.

TD

Two Dogs:

Is Bret Favre unretiring and going to Minnesota? Does Peyton Manning see the Colts falling with the loss of Dungy? Can Brady have success with the Patriots this year? Can Romo get it done this season?

Keenan

Ft. Worth

Keenan:

If Bret can get non-surgical help on his shoulder, and that's a BIG if, yeah, he'll try and the Vike's will take him. Manning's upset with the Coaching transition and yes, he doesn't see the same level that Dungy brought. I'm not sure if Brady's success hinges upon his rebuilt knee or if newly acquired grey haired receiver Joey Galloway can split the field open with Moss. Not many people have confidence in Romo's new lead receiver, Williams, nor in offensive coordinator Jason Garrett's play calling. Tony crashes late, and Garrett didn't play a healthy Felix Jones in a game.

TD

If at the end of the trail you've tried and lived through a couple of your fantasies and are content and not bitter, you can hang your spurs with pride.

IT'S HARD TO FIND A GOOD DONKEY SHOW

The Weekly Adventures Of OJ Tobias

This column is kind of a bummer. If you are a pussy and prone to crying like a bitch, don't read any more, you big pussy.

Seems I got the cancer. I thought it was a pulled muscle next to my cock but I went to my doctor and he did a lot of tests that all came back with "you're fked" as an answer. I asked him about getting a second opinion. He was totally cool about it. I hear most doctors are asses about it, so he pulled out the tarot cards (again), Ouija board (again) and asked a different spirit guide. Then the magic happened. All I gotta do is buy this $100 incense and burn it every week to keep the cancer at bay. God bless Chris the Shaman. He is the best doctor I ever had.

But now that I got the cancer, I really need to do all the things that I never got a chance to do. In a way it is relieving, knowing you only have a certain amount of time left on the planet. It really gives you a new perspective on life. (I have known the meaning of life for over a year, so I don't wonder about that. I will put it in my next column)

I made a list of things I would like to accomplish before the cancer gets me:

1. Mainline smack.
2. Masturbate until I am so dehydrated I need an I.V.
3. Not get caught at the zoo after hours in a gorilla cage.
5. Get a library card. I have always wanted some form of I.D.

6. Legally change my name to King Ding-A-Ling.
7. Max out every credit card, even the ones I find in mail boxes.
8. Push someone out of an airplane.
9. Floss.
10. Get arrested for just looking at a cop funny (this should be easy).
11. Learn to speak dog.
12. Get blown by a tranny with a smaller dick than me (for some reason, trannies got big cocks!)

I guess I should also think about doing some good for others, so I made a list of things I should do for all the little people in my life:

1. Give my editor Bill back his hot pink laptop with the Hello Kitty stickers all over it. (That is good for both of us. Hot Pink! Really!)
2. Give Old Man Mike a proper burial. Apparently, his corpse is still stuck in his house walking around and shit.
3. Let Colleen blow me. Won't she be elated... sometimes I wish I was someone else so I could get the chance to blow me.
4. Tell everyone the true meaning of Life.

I got to get busy on this shit, so I need to get to the liquor store to get started. If you would like to send me a sympathy card, fk that, you pussy. But you can send cash to the Metro ANE office. Just put in attention King Ding-A-Ling.

Electric Motorcycles Gain Traction

Get ready for an American motorcycle revolution. That deep Harley rumble and the siren call of the Suzuki whine will soon be sharing the road with silent bikes. A slew of sleek, lightweight machines, either fully electric or hybrid, is making its debut and signaling a paradigm shift in both motorcycle culture and green transportation.

The $9,950 Zero S will go on sale this spring, one of the first plug-in motorcycles widely available in the U.S. Weighing in at just 225 pounds, this bike is made by former NASA engineer Neal Saiki and his three-year-old Santa Cruz, Calif., start-up.

Electric bikes' biggest draw is the fact they cost less than 1 cent per mile to drive; Saiki's Zero S goes 60 miles on one charge and can hit 60 miles per hour at top speed.

Historically, Americans have used motorcycles for play, not work, while Europeans and Asians rely on small motorbikes for inexpensive transport through narrow streets. But that divide is slowly narrowing, says Paolo Timoni, president of Italy-based motorcycle maker Piaggio USA. Piaggio sells seven brands of motorcycles and scooters worldwide.

A recently passed 10% federal tax credit for electric motorcycles has no doubt helped spur interest as well.

200MPH Bike Uses US Military Cruise Missile Engines

200mph in 7.887 seconds. That and liquified brains when you smash against a concrete wall is what this superbike will get you.

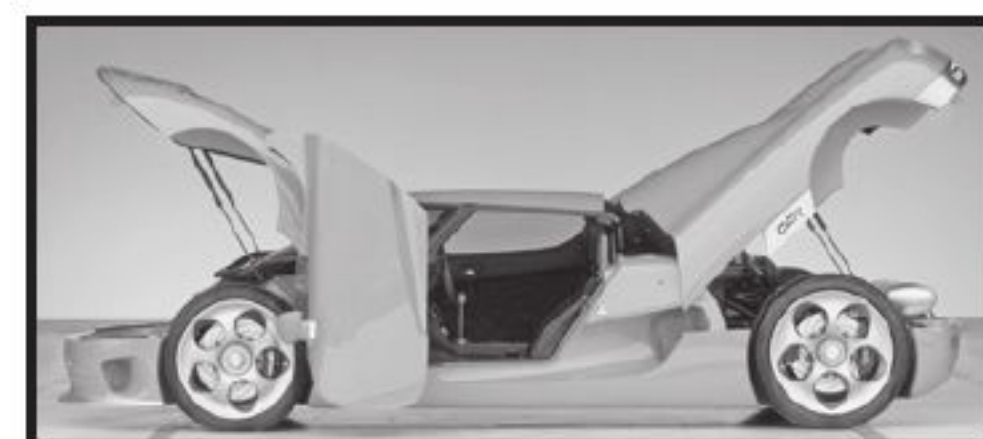

Each of its J402-CA-702 Model 373 turbines—originally used in cruise missiles—have 1,000 pounds of trust.

Koenigsegg Wants To Buy Saab

Supercar maker Koenigsegg wants to buy its long-neglected, but quirky, neighbor Saab. That would be the best thing to happen to the brand that's not really born from jets since GM bought it in 1990.

The three remaining bidders for Saab are Koenigsegg, billionaire Ira Rennert and Jim Press's personal saviour, Fiat.

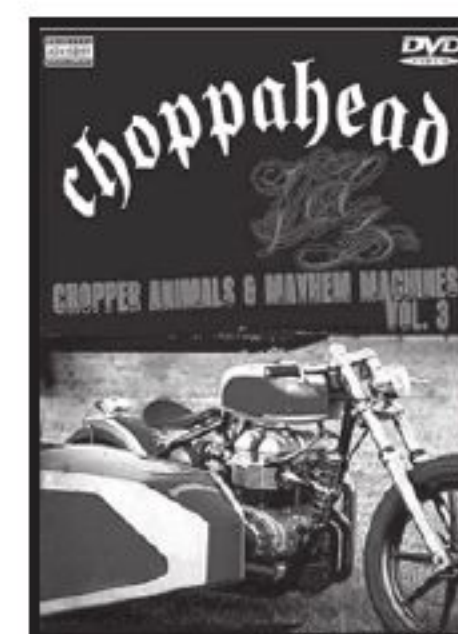

As former Saab enthusiasts, we've got all our fingers and toes crossed for a Koenigsegg purchase. The engineering know-how and enthusiasm of that brand might just be the only thing capable of restoring the Swedish automaker to its former glory as a maker of truly weird and wonderful cars.

Choppahead "Chopper Animals & Mayhem Machines" Vol. 3 DVD

Choppahead is proud to present the third volume in their award-winning documentary/video magazine series – CHOPPER ANIMALS AND MAYHEM MACHINES. The unholy trilogy is now complete!

If you haven't seen the first two, here's the deal: This series documents and pays homage to the home-builder and the underground chopper/custom motorcycle scene – the true essence of Kustom Culture. You won't find any network-cry baby-inflated megalogo-psuedo-star-bull$hit builders here. You know what shows to watch for that!

In this DVD you'll follow the Choppahead crew as they go out on-location and scour the nation to present you with some real-deal motorcycle builders – the guys that build in their own garage/kitchen/living room/driveway/wherever – as well as some small grassroots shops, and underground motorcycle shows/rallies. Once again you'll get an inside look into the madness, ingenuity, debauchery, and foolishness that surrounds this world!

The Six Foot Walk On Water Ball

This giant 6' inflatable sphere lets you walk across water as fast as you can stride thanks to hundreds of exterior inset cups that help "grip" the lake or ocean surface as you "clamber up" the sphere's interior (play the video.) With two of the fleet, buoyant spheres, opponents can race on the water, or bump and bounce the against one another harmlessly. A speed valve allows rapid inflation (electric pump sold separately) of the ball in approximately five minutes, and the sphere can be quickly and safely deflated through the same valve for easy storage and transport in the trunk of a car. The heavy-gauge PVC ball has two entrance/exit openings, and supports a single occupant up to 170 lbs.

it was predicted today.

Experts are on the verge of perfecting a tiny microchip that reads swabs or blood tests and slots into a mobile phone, so it can be sent to your doctor. The gadget will eliminate painful waits for laboratory reports and allow doctors to carry out vital blood tests with immediate results.

As yet un-named, the device will also be made available to paramedics attending everyday emergencies. The invention is the result of a collaboration between Orla Protein Technologies and Tokyo-based Japan Radio Company.

Orla CEO Dale Athey believes the benefits of such an invention will be huge for health services around the globe and will dramatically change the way potentially fatal conditions are diagnosed and treated.

He said: "Using the device reduces the waiting time for patients, always a nerve-racking experience, and allows doctors to begin treatment much earlier than previously possible. Doctors will be able to carry out tests at a patient's bedside instead of waiting for lab results. It will plug into a mobile phone and then only require a wireless network to enable the test results to be sent to whoever needs them."

Samsung Pixon 12: The First 12-Mega Pixel Cameraphone For Sale

Fortunately, the Pixon's 12-megapixel claim to greatness, which guarantees you nothing at all except for the industry's largest file sizes, is complemented by some decent specs, starting with a 3.1" AMOLED touchscreen, 3G and FM radio.

Obviously, though, the flash-equipped camera is the star of the show here, and while relentless megapixel one-upmanship is fruitless and annoying, the Pixon looks like it'll be a decent pocket shooter despite its narrow obsession. Touch autofocus lets you choose a focal point with a finger tap, after which the camera will automatically keep focus on its subject. Shooting speed is quicker than average, clocking in at about two seconds per shot. A bevy of online photo services are supported out of the box, and video recording, though not HD, records at a respectable 720 x 480.

The 150MB internal storage is glaringly weak for a camera-centric phone, though I suspect, as is usually the case, that carriers will bundle SD cards when the Pixon finally goes on sale, which will be in June in Europe, and August elsewhere.

The New Generation DVD That Can Hold All Of Your Movies On Just One Disc

A DVD that can store up to 2,000 films could usher in an age of three-dimensional TV and ultra-high definition viewing, scientists say. The ultra-DVD is the same size and thickness as a conventional disc, but uses nano-technology to store vast amounts of information. One disc could back up the memory of a computer or record thousands of hours of film.

The breakthrough comes from Swinburne University of Technology, Melbourne, Australia, where scientists created a prototype using 'nano rods' - tiny particles of gold too small to see - and polarised light, in which the light waves only flow in one direction.

A DVD can hold up to 8.5 gigabytes of information, enough for a movie, several special features and an alternative soundtrack. Blu-ray discs, which were designed to replace them, can store 50GB, enough for a film and extra features in high definition. But ultra-DVDs will be able to store ten terabytes - or 10,000GB.

The researchers, who have agreed a deal with Samsung, admit recording on to ultra-DVDs is complicated and time consuming. The discs would allow vast amount of information to be stored on a cheap, disposable disc.

Currently, people have to use portable hard disc drives to store the equivalent amount of data. Consumers would need to buy new DVD players to use the discs - although they should be able to read the older Blu-ray and DVDs, the researcher said. The technology could help usher in an age of 3D TV or ultra-high definition.

Afghans Will Block Web Porn
Restrictions almost always seem to start with porn, and that's certainly the case with a new plan by the Afghan government to curtail Internet use.

Afghanistan's first fiber-optic cable will come online in a few weeks, and communications and information ministries are considering Web access limitations, reports new service AFP.

Officials believe the "free Internet environment" is being abused by many, especially young people.

The government said the move seeks to foil propaganda from Islamist insurgents who claim access to porn in not controlled, according to Inquirer.net.

The Afghan government is drafting the legislation, which will address Web use and also include the aforementioned curbs as well as govern the registration of .af domains.

Internet access in Afghanistan came in late 2001, following the end of the totalitarian Taliban, taken down by international forces led by the U.S.

India's Anti-Porn Law Comes with Harsh Penalties

A recently passed new law in India could bring a five-year jail sentence and a fine as much as 1 million rupees ($1.4 million) for browsing or downloading pornographic pictures or films.

The Information Technology (Amendment) Bill, which passed last December without debate in India's Parliament, is a new version of the act, first initiated in 2000.

FEELING DIRTY

All About Porn: Releases, News and Stars!

The law, notes UK adult site Hush-Hush, gives sweeping powers to authorities, including raids and arrests without a warrant. A second offence could lead to a longer jail sentence of seven years. Just visiting a home page of a site would open up user to investigation.

New Site Brings 'Edge' to Adult

It's all about branding and the new EdgeXD wants to become the brand for men's adult entertainment and lifestyle.

Officially launched this week by Top Shelf Media Partners' founder Brent Chapman, EdgeXD already is looking like a Maxim/FHM of porn and that's just what he's going for.

Hosting a large and still-expanding library of adult content, from classics to original productions, EdgeXD features some of the hottest playmates, pets and porn stars, such as 2007 Penthouse Pet of the Year Heather Vandeven and Penthouse Pet of the Month, November 2007, Lux Kassidy as the site's featured stars and tour hosts.

EdgeXD's exclusive content discovery and delivery system makes it easy for customers to not only find the video they want, but stash it, share it and enjoy it like never before.

EdgeXD also features stock quotes, sports scores, gadget and tech pieces, music and film reviews and other non-adult content in its "Lounge" area. But porn will always be at the center of things. www.edgexd.com

Faux Hasselhoff, Ronson To Appear In Porn Film

Faux David Hasselhoff and Lindsay Lohan's ex Samantha Ronson will soon be appearing in a new Sarah Palin-related porn film called 'Hollywood is Nailin' Paylin'. The film is a sequel to Hustler Video's hit parody 'Who's Nailin' Paylin?' and will see Otto Bauer playing Hasselhoff and Sara Faye as DJ Ronson.

In the X-rated movie, Palin look-alike Lisa Ann will attempt to break into Tinseltown after losing her bid to become America's Vice-President. Thus, she auditions for a role on CSI: Crime Scene Investigation and plans a brand new talk show and reality show, called 'America's Next Top Governor'.

In the process, she meets the fake Hasselhoff,

Ronson and magician Criss Angel (Alan Stafford), reports The Contactmusic. The shooting for the sequel will start in California next month.

Sasha Grey Not Closing Curtain On X-Rated Films

Award-winning pornstar Sasha Grey may have made it to the mainstream but she's not about to abandon her X-rated roots. The AVN and XRCO 2008 "Female Performer of the Year" has recently attracted a lot of attention for her role in the Steven Soderbergh film, "the Girlfriend Experience."

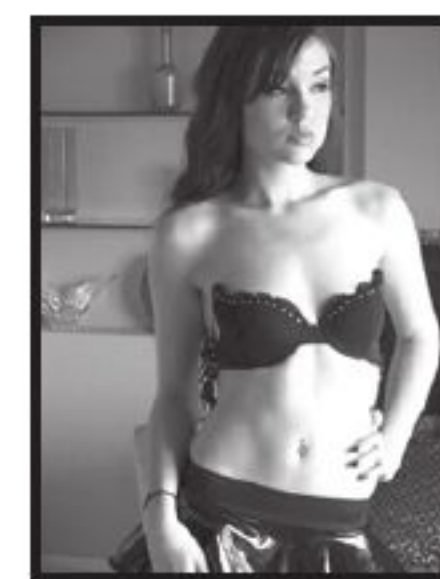

Grey's first major mainstream role certainly won't be her last: She has two more mainstream movies, "Quit" and "Smash Cut," due out this summer. Still, Grey isn't about to turn her back on the industry that made her a (porn) star.

Unlike many adult film stars, who try to use their X-rated stardom to transition into mainstream roles, Grey said she never intended to make the switch.

"It's not something that I ever sought out," she said, suggesting the mainstream came to her, not the other way around.

Grey said she hoped to become the first actress to simultaneously appear in both adult and mainstream films.

"There's never really been anybody, any woman, in the adult business to really hold both at the same time," she observed.

Ass Angels 7 Adam & Eve

The good thing about all the porn getting sent to me at the office is that I get first picks. Then I divide it to my helpful elves. Pretty much anything with ass in the title goes straight to me. I like butts and I'm in to metal, which usually means I'm a deviant and I like my porn edgy. So Ass Angels 7 isn't really about asses, it's about naughty girls getting it in the ass. Batter, batter, swing!

Best scene on here goes to Tori Lane who also happens to have the first scene on here. Wow! Tori Lane is a cardio sex machine. I got worked up and worn out watching her. Plus she is pretty hot, like a southern belle bartending at a biker bar.

If you a fan of double penetration, than your in for treat cause their are double of them. Naughty cheerleader like Vanessa Lane and Victoria Sin both take on two guys... simultaneously. Both scenes are winners, but the Victoria Sin was my favorite plus she had lots of dirty talk for her men.

A few of the scenes I had seen before in other releases, but for 4 hours a majority of it was new to me and will be re watched soon. I'm give it four out five. This will definitely stay in my collection.

International Lingerie Show & Storerotica Magazine Announce Combined Show for Fall 2009 at The Rio in Las Vegas

In an effort to make convention/tradeshow attendance more economical for both store owners and vendors and to flesh out the offerings of two industry shows, the producers of the Fall INTERNATIONAL LINGERIE SHOW and the new STOREROTICA "What's New Marketplace" Show will combine forces to present the largest convention and tradeshow for the intimate apparel and soft adult products industries this September 21-23, 2009 at The Rio Hotel & Casino in Las Vegas.

The Fall 2009 combined shows mean more vendor booths, more buyer attendees, exclusive evening events, a series of educational seminars and workshops dubbed the "Smart Sessions," and an annual industry Awards Show, which will be held in conjunction with the ILS Fashion Show on Monday, September 21st. The full agenda of events and guest speakers is available at www.Storerotica.com.

ILS will continue to present a stellar line-up of top-end industry vendors in their Tradeshow in The Rio's Pavilion and Miranda Ballrooms, while Storerotica's "What's New Marketplace" Show will include a tradeshow for new, up-and-coming companies across the hall in The Rio's Brasilia Ballroom. Storerotica will also produce the "Smart Sessions"—featuring a stellar lineup of industry heavyweights—in The Rio's Tropical Room for store owners, reflecting the same must-have expertise presented in their bimonthly magazine.

"We are very excited that Jeff Yunis and Michael Moreira have agreed to have Storerotica, as both an industry magazine and convention, be a part of the ILS program," said Storerotica Magazine Publisher Don Waitt. "It just makes sense to combine our forces and give this industry a conference that offers both buyers and exhibitors the most comprehensive and exciting agenda possible."

"We have long been interested in expanding our ILS tradeshow to include 'conference' types of activities like panel sessions and workshops," said ILS' Moreira, "and we know that Storerotica, which has long been a supporter of our show and of the industry, will deliver this new component to the ILS Fall show."

To attend the Fall 2009 ILS Show as a buyer or an exhibitor or for details about the show, log on to www.spectrade.com or call Specialty Trade Shows at (305) 598-7019. For details about the 2009 STOREROTICA "What's New Marketplace" Show being held at the same time, log on to www.Storerotica.com or call STOREROTICA Magazine at (727) 723-8827.

SEX IN THE NEWZ

Judge Says South Carolina Can't Charge Craigslist

A South Carolina U.S. District Court judge has issued a temporary restraining order blocking state Attorney General Henry McMaster from following through on his agenda to pursue criminal charges against ad site Craigslist.

CNN reports that Friday, Judge C. Weston Houck said the court must first rule on the merits of Craigslist's claims in its lawsuit filed against McMaster and his office. For now, the AG may not initiate any investigation with intent to prosecute the ad site for allegedly knowingly promoting prostitution through its ad postings.

Under section 230 of the Communications Decency Act, a website cannot be held criminally or civilly liable for the postings of its users. To that effect Craigslist appears protected under the act's safe harbor law, but McMaster's office contends there are limits to such protection.

According to news service UPI, the restraining order does not mean a victory for Craigslist in its lawsuit, which seeks declaratory judgment and injunctive relief, and argues McMaster's actions violated free speech rights along with the CDA.

Writing on the Craigslist blog, CEO Jim Buckmaster noted an AP report that claimed McMaster has not prosecuted even one prostitution case in his seven years as South Carolina attorney general, and also, has not objected to local newspapers running adult service ads.

Chinese Sex Chat Room Operators Get Jail Time

Operators of Chinese Web "sex chat rooms" have been sentenced to two to four years in prison. The mastermind of the operation, Li Yun, is from Taiwan and was sentenced to four years in prison. The court said he served as an agent for "several Taiwan-based porn chat websites," had been running the business in Zhuhai since early 2005, and recruited a number various assistants working as "managers and financial staff" the court said.

The assistants also recruited girls from across the country to log on to the chat rooms and to take part in sex chats with men, who paid to join in at a rate of anywhere between 1 Taiwan dollar (a quarter of a yuan) to 20 Taiwan dollars for every minute of the conversation.

Man Begs Doctors To Undo Penis Enlargement Surgery

Just one month after undergoing a penis enlargement surgery, a patient of a Moscow plastic surgery clinic has asked the doctors to restore the original size of his penis.

In February the 40-years-old man, identified as Konstantin F., came to the clinic complaining he was too small, Life.ru website reports Monday. The man wanted to add an extra two-thirds to his penis and get 25 cm (9.8 inches) instead of his 15 cm (5.9 inches).

The doctors tried to persuade the patient that his penis was ideally sized, warned that he may be unhappy with the results of the surgery, and even showed him a life-sized replica of a 25-cm male organ. But the man stood his ground and demanded the operation.

The surgery was completed in two sessions, and happy Konstantin returned home almost twice as large as he used to be. But in just one month he was back at the clinic again, this time asking to undo the enlargement.

"He said no woman wants to be with him anymore," Life.ru quoted one of the doctors as saying. "He came here several times, begged us for new surgery, swore he would never be so stupid again. 'If there was a surgery to enlarge brains, we would offer him a free trial,' the doctor said.

Secretary Accidentally Bites Off Boss' Penis

A secretary accidentally bit off the penis of her employer while giving him oral sex in a car. It was reported that while the 30-year-old woman was performing oral sex on the man, the car was hit by a reversing van. The impact of the crash, China Press reported, caused the woman to bite off her lover's organ.

The daily reported that the incident occurred in a Singapore park where the couple met after work. To make matters worse for the woman, her husband had sent a private investigator to spy on her after suspecting that she was being unfaithful.

The investigator said he had followed the woman and her boss to the park.

"On reaching the park, they did not alight from the car. Not long after, the car started to shake violently. After the car was hit by the van, there was a loud scream from the woman whose mouth was covered with blood," he said.

Topless Waitress Caught Outside

A state trooper was sent Saturday morning to a topless doughnut shop on Route 3 after a caller to the Augusta communications center reported that one of the waitresses was outside the shop without a top on.

"I went there and spoke to the owner and the female that was probably involved and I advised them it was going to be turned over to the district attorney for possible review," Trooper Shawn Porter of Troop D Barracks in Gray said later in the day. "Nobody was charged; it's going to be reviewed by the DA's office."

Trooper Porter said he does not know what the rules are in Vassalboro regarding such matters, but went to Grand View in response to a complaint.

He said he did not enter the establishment and made sure the woman in question was fully clothed when she and owner Donald Crabtree met with him.

'Grand Theft Auto IV' gets its newest version: 'The Ballad of Gay Tony'

Rockstar Games announced today that the second Xbox 360 "episode" of its blockbuster videogame Grand Theft Auto IV will have the eyebrow-raising title "The Ballad of Gay Tony." The vignette, available this fall, will allow players to control "part time hoodlum" Luis Lopez as he works as an assistant for "legendary nightclub impresario" Tony Prince, who is also apparently known as "Gay Tony." It is unclear whether that means the character is homosexual. Xbox 360 players will be able to download the episode using Xbox Live for $19.99 or purchase it as a DVD disc that will also contain the first GTA IV episode, "The Lost and the Damned," for $39.99.

No, Sonia Sotomayor Isn't Gay. But Is She Gay Friendly?

Forget Sonia Sotomayor's YouTube moment. And that she's a pronunciation traitor. And that she's a racist! The real scandal about the prospective Supreme Court justice is that she's a big dyke!

HA HA HA J/K! Sort of.

For all intents and purposes, Sotomayor is a happily single heterosexual. Sure, she divorced from her husband way back in 1983. And sure, she never remarried. And sure, she enjoys a best friendship with a gal pal that screams "Oprah-Gayle."

But don't let any of that make you think Obama is appointing a gay to the court — which seems to be the running theory on how the GOP could try to sabotage her appointment.

(But if Sotomayor were a lesbian, how amusing would it be that she would replace suspected gay David Souter?)

Where we should be connecting gays to Sotomayor, however, is with analysis on how she'll swing when it comes to issues of equality.

Except she has barely any history on GLBT issues, as Chris Crain notes. Her 11 years with the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit so far turns up nothing about gay or AIDS-related rulings, and neither did her six years as a judge with the U.S. District Court judge in New York.

That hasn't stopped Gay Inc. from (cautiously) being optimistic about Sotomayor. But rest assured: Gay legal organizations like Lambda Legal and the ACLU's LGBT division are launching a full court press (just like every other interest group) to see where she stands.

And then come the identity politics. In 2001 Sotomayor said that "a wise Latina woman with the richness of her experiences would more often than not reach a better conclusion" than a "white male" judge. That touches on the "empathy" criteria President Obama said he was looking for; in theory, a person belonging to a minority would understand the plights of Americans better than a blinder-wearing person in the majority.

But that's not always the case: Gays can be racist, blacks can be anti-gay, and Jews can hate Muslims.

So as we prepare for Sotomayor's confirmation (we expect the Senate Democrats to OK her without much fanfare), the question remains: What can she do for us? Are we looking at a woman who will understand the importance of equality and privacy? Or do we know so little about where Sotomayor stands that assuming she's an ally is too great a risk?

Fairfax High's Prom Queen Is A Guy
Sergio Garcia stood in the gymnasium and told the senior class at Fairfax High School not to worry: If he was elected, he wouldn't wear a dress.

"I will be wearing a suit," Garcia said, "but don't be fooled, deep down inside, I am a queen!"

Garcia, 18, spent most of his years at Fairfax openly gay and wanted to be part of the Los Angeles school's prom court -- but not as prom king. He felt that vying for prom queen would better suit his personality, so he decided to seek that crown, running against a handful of female classmates.

He said it started out as a bit of a stunt and challenge -- he wasn't sure the school would allow it. But his campaign for queen ended up being serious and sparking dialogue about gender roles on campus.

A few days before the dance and election, the contenders gave short speeches on why they deserved the crown.

"At one time, prom may have been a big popularity contest where the best-looking guy or girl were crowned king and queen. Things have changed and it's no longer just about who has the most friends or who wears the coolest clothes," Garcia told the crowd of seniors. "Sure, I'm not your typical prom queen candidate. There's more to me than meets the eye."

The audience erupted in applause after his speech, and a group of his female friends spent the rest of the week wearing pink crowns and campaigning for him.

On Saturday night at the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel, wearing a charcoal-gray tuxedo and a black bow tie, he was named prom queen.

He's among the first male students in Southern California to take the title usually owned by female high school beauties.

"It just shows how open-minded our class is," said Vanessa Lo, 18, the school's senior class president.
